G. O. P. FUTURE GIVES CONCERN TO THE CHIEFS

Election Outlook for Next Fall Discussed at White House Dinner

DOMESTIC ISSUES

Bonus and Refunding of Allied Debt to be Pressed—Attitude of Farmers Worries Leaders.

Washington Jan. 9.—Politics is beginning to crowd the international Conference out of the limelight.

Concern for the political future is apparent in the ranks of the Administration and of the Republican majority in Congress and the party leaders are taking counsel on measures to insure Republican success in the 1922 Congressional election, the primaries of which are already close at hand.

The conference of Senate and House leaders with the President following the dinner at the White House last night was in reality the occasion of a political stock taking. To what extent the Republican party has succeeded and failed in living up to the expectations of the public and how the record can be improved this session of Congress was the central theme of the discussion.

Attorney-General Daugherty, Secretary of War Weeks and Republican National Chairman Adams were there to give the President and the legislative leaders the benefits of their political judgment. The absence of postmaster-General Hays famed for political sagacity, is noted as possibly significant if impending retirement from the Cabinet.

The attitude of the farmers is worrying the party chieftains, the activities of the agrarian bloc indicating the extent of rural dissatisfaction with existing conditions. The forthcoming agricultural conference is designed to crystallize a program of legislation that will meet the just demands of the farmers.

The ex-service men are to get bonus legislation although the Administration has only the vaguest notions of how it is to be financed.

The work of the Conference on the Limitation of Armament is regarded as a big party asset but of itself probably not sufficient to guarantee victory in the election. This consideration is due in part the proposal to rush domestic legislation, adjourn Congress early and call the Senate into extra session to consider the treaties produced by the Conference.

Whatever the outcome of the election, Republicans will retain control of the Senate. The chief anxiety concerns the House, a reduction in the Republican majority of which is expected in any event. Loss of the House would embarrass Republican prospects in 1924.

There is a good deal of Republican insurgency in Congress visualized chiefly by the agrarian bloc, and the Republican leadership, which is conservative, is trying out all sorts of schemes to circumvent it. A special effort is to be made to end the Senatorial career of Robt. M. La Follette of Wisconsin, who is a candidate for renomination next spring.

As the result of discussions held Saturday between President Harding and representative Republican leaders after the White House dinner, decision was practically reached on the following points:

Early enactment of a soldier bonus bill.

Early assembling of a Republican Senate conference to reconcile any differences which may be found to exist in party councils over the form of legislation for refunding allied debts.

The two subjects were connected in the discussion, since the possible income of the debts, it was generally agreed, stood out as the best chance of recouping expenditures for the proposed bonus, with a sales tax suggested as the only alternative.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

(From our Special Correspondent.)

Washington Jan. 9.—President Harding and the other Republican leaders are very much worried over the reports they are receiving from every section of the country telling of the dissatisfaction that exists to the present conduct of the affairs of government by the party in power. Harsh criticism is heard on every hand about the neglect of Congress, both Senate and House to place on the statute books the legislation of relief for the people of the country that was promisd them by the party in power. This dissatisfaction seems to be general throughout the country and is causing the Chief Executive and his advisors no end of worry. That is why the President called his followers to the White House on Saturday night. He is going to take a very prominent part in Congressional affairs in the future in the hope of stemming the tide of opposition that is running against the Republican administration.

On the other hand, the Democrats are confident that they will regain at the next election. Representative Rouse, of Kentucky, who was chosen as Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee as the successor to the late Representative Henry D. Flood, of Virginia, has already started to work getting his organization perfected for the coming political battle. Reports received by him are of the most encouraging nature and it is freely predicted that the present overwhleming Republican majority in the House will be turned into Democratic control next November.

Arthur James Balfour, head of the British delegation to the Arms Conference is quite optimistic in his views concerning the final settlement of the Shantung question between the Chinese and Japanese. This problem has been one of the stumbling blocks before the Conference, and up to the present time there has seemed little chance of any agreement.

"The points of difference between the Chinese and Japanese," declared Mr. Balfour to the Gazette correspondent today, "that I feel certain that they can be satisfactorily adjusted. I do not believe that the negotiations and conferences now taking place between the Chinese and Japanese over the Shantung question will result in a deadlock."

Things are in such shape before the Conference on the Limitation of Armaments and Pacific and Far East ern questions that one and probably two plenary sessions of the gathering will take place during the present week. Such is the belief of the American delegates, at least, and they express themselves as entirely satisfied with the results so far accomplished Of course, the failure of the French to agree upon a limitation in submarine tonnage was a bitter disappointment, not only to the American reprresentatives, but to England and Italy as well. But despite the course adopted by the French respecting the use of submarines, the fact that rules and reuglations have been agreed to which will prevent their attacking merchant ships in future wars has been hailed as a great victory by the civilized nations. And the ban placed upon the use of poison gas is regarded as a great victory for the cause of humanity.

Inquiry at the Postoffice Department today discovered that the United States Civil Service Commission has not as yet certified the names of the three highest candidates who took the examination for postmaster at Alexandria on December 20 last. Postmaster General Hayes declared that he had not given the Alexandria office his attention up to the present time. Rerpresentative Bascom Slemp the Republican dictator of patronage in the Old Dominion declared on Saturday that he was waiting to hear from the Civil Service Commission and the Postmaster General before taking any action in the case. It is expected that within the next few days Mr. Slemp will call at the White House and hand to the Chief Executive the name of the man whom he wants to be the next postmaster at Alexandria. In the mean time, all of the candidates are bringing political pressure to bear in the hope of being the lucky one to be chosen for the post.

You cannot get Admiral Baron Kato, head of the Japanese delegation to the Arms Conference to admit that cigarettes are hard on the nerves. The Japanese Admiral smokes the "pills" incessantly as do the other members of the delegation from his country. And to look at the Japanese you would not think that they had any nerves in their body. If smoking is bad for the nervous system as some claims no proof of such contention can be obtained from the Japanese representatives now in Washington.

The work of resurfacing what is known as the Leesburg turnpike between Alexandria'scorporate limits on the west and Donaldson's store a distance of one and eight tenth miles, was begun Saturday. Barrett, of the National Catholic Welfare Council. Mr. Barrett delivered an eloquent address, dwelling on the aims and purposes of the society which he declared was to prevent blasphemy. Afterward there was a short address by P. A. Kersey, of this city, on the local organization and its work. The affair was brought to a close with a few remarks by Rev. L. F. Kelly spiritual director of the order in this city.

DISTRICT WORKHOUSE

An Interesting Institution Occoquan

Our Reporter Interviews Assistant Superintendent Green

One of the Gazette's reporters was assigned to the District of Columbia Work House at Occoquan the other day—no, not for boot-legging, but in the eyes of some people, for a crime far more serious, curiosity.

He walked into a nicely furnished office and asked for the superintendent and was told that he was absent, but that in his absence his assistant Hugh H. Green was in charge. He met Mr. Green, who immediately invited him to take a little walk around the place.

So out of the back door of the office they went and at once found themselves in the midst of a group of farm buildings suitable for a farm of 2700 acres—which this is, at present employing about 230 hands for whom no weekly or monthly payroll must be made. These inmates were attending to their various tasks as unconcernedly and as happily as if they were drawing down their's every Saturday night. The seeming freedom of these people gave rise to a question in the mind of the reporter. "Don't you have a lot of escapes around here, and where are the guards?" he asked. "O," replied Mr. Green, "we have a few escapes now and then, but as a general thing the men don't run much. You see we treat them so well that there is no reason for them to try to escape. Besides there are guards—we employ about forty-four guards—twenty on guard when the men are working, and twelve stand guard on each of the two shifts when the men are eating and sleeping."

They then stepped into the recreation hall, where the men sit and read when their day's work is done. Once a week moving pictures are shown to them in this building. At one end of this same big hall there was a barber chair and an inmate barber shaving an inmate customer.

Next they visited the sleeping quarters, which are arranged in army style—save that there are sheets. The big barracks buildings are arranged to accommodate about 200 men each. "Don't you have a lot of sickness," inquired the reporter when he noted the number of men that are required to sleep in the same room. Mr. Green answered that the condition was quite the contrary and that there was rarely any sickness at all. This he attributed to the fact that the ventilation system almost perfect.

Prizes For Pioneers

Two prizes were presented to Pioneers at the First Baptist Sunday School yesterday morning which were won in an essay contest. Eagle Troop No. 5, of that Sunday School visited the Old Dominion Glass factory several weeks ago and the boys submitted essays on their visit. William Jester was awarded first prize which was a Boy Scout knife. McIver Jackson won second prize, which was also a pocket knife.

The troop, which is also a missionary organization of the church, has been rendering splendid service to the church, and Dr. E. B. Jackson, the pastor, paid the boys an enthusiastic eulogy after the presentation of the prizes. The boys are known as "Royal Embassadors" in the church and their work in assisting the pastor or church counts on their credits when they are charted as Pioneers. The troop will doubtless rank high on the service side.

CHINESE PACT MAY MEET WITH OPPOSITION

Opponents of Four-Power Treaty May Attack Asiatic Agreement

PROMISE NOT ENOUGH

Chinese Insist They Will Have Been Unfairly Treated if Proposed Pact Goes Through

Washington Jan. 9.—Opponents of the four-power treaty and of some other results of the Conference are bginning to manifest very keen interest in the forthcoming agreement or treaty bearing on China and Asiatic questions in general. And there is more than a suspicion that they have their guns trained to shoot as soon as it appears.

The understanding is that the terms of the agreement or treaty worked out in their minds, if, indeed, they have not had it put on paper in tentative form. It is expected to embody the four Root rules for the protection of China that already have been adoped by the Conference, Beyond that little is known.

The belief of critics of the four-power pact and of others in touch with the Conference's work is that the new treaty, which it is thought will be signed by all the eight powers in the Conference, other than China—and possibly that nation too—will do little for China except to set up the Root principles. They may be fooled by Mr. Hughes, but that is their belief.

And while they do not discount the worth of the Root rules, if adhered to, and while some of them believe those rules may be given more respect than similar declarations have been given by these same powers in the past, they are saying that China will have been given a raw deal, if all that is done for her in territorial matters is to extract from the powers another promise to behave themselves. That, of course is what the Chinese are saying and what those Chinese who have left for home were saying very violently when they took their departure.

That might have no other effect than intellectual and emotional resentment were it not that the four-power act is pending. Though champions of China might deeply regret that no more was done for China, they might accept the Root rules as progress. But with the four-power pact pending a Chinese or Asiatic treaty that does little more than make promises of good behavior in the future will be read into the four power pact by its enemies as acquiesence by the United States in the other powers' past aggressions.

Again, it is to be said that Mr. Hughes may unexpectedly fool the critics, but if he does not they will go to the country with this argument.

China has been subjected to all sorts of stealings for many years. And here is the United States entering in to an agreement bearing on China that acquiesces in these matters, and, at the same time entering into a four power pact under which it agrees that any disturbances in the Pacific regions affecting either Japan, Great Britain or France, all of whom have profited by the past aggressions in China, are to be made matters of conference, if not of military action, as claimed by the Borah group.

The conclusion in the reasoning will be that, having agreed that the powers shall retain the fruits of their agressions the United States will be making the preservation of the status quo its own business, either through moral and economic influence or through military and naval action, if the Borah theory about the four power pact is accepted.

Xaverian School Notes

Rev. Bro. Osmund A. M., school examiner of the American Province of the order, spent last week at the school. His visit was in the nature of an examination. This being his first visit here, only words of praise were given the students and faculty on the high standing of the school In his final talk he said, "though the school is in its infancy, I congratulate you and your teachers on the work done in the past few years." His terriotory as school examiner comprises states from Maine to Kansas.

Dr. Hugh Kahalan, of Southern Mary land spent the week-end at the school As he is a crack basket ball player, his visit was in interest of private school teams.

Rev Bro. Francis, who has been pursuing a cource at the University of St. Xavier, Bruges, Belgium, and who is an old student of our principal, was our guest on his return to this country recently.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

We publish elsewhere in today's Gazette an official communication from the Alexandria Trades Council, calling attention to the lack of educational facilities for the children of Alexandria. We note especially the mention of the dissatisfaction of the men employed at the Torpedo Plant in connection with the lack of opportunity afforded their children to acquire a public school education. Many of these men reside in Washington; and many other heads of families who rightfully belong to Alexandria, also reside in Washington, for two reasons, mainly: first, because of inadequate educational facilities in this city; and, second, because of inadequate housing facilities. This last objection we will take up at some other time. But the woful deficiency in school equipment is pertinent today in connection with the communication from the Alexandria Trades Council to which we have alluded.

That Alexandria is a laggard in her public school provision we do not believe anyone of her citizens will deny. This fact has been glaringly apparent for several years past. Half-day education; no education; teachers overwhelmed and overburdened by crowded school-rooms; even those of our little ones lucky enough to secure a whole day's tuition, unable to get the proper attention because of this latter fact; these are matters which demand drastic remedy. It is not a matter of mere reform; it calls for a whole-hearted and deep-seated revolution. The Gazette, after looking carefully into all phases of the matter, is convinced that no one is to blame; and because of this, everybody is to blame; every man and woman in this city is to blame. True, there are those among us who have wrought unselfishly and nobly to increase our educational facilities and improve our system—but has their work been steady and consecutive—has it not been spasmodic and irregular? Have they gone to the root of the matter? They have, in our opinion, labored to check the symptoms and failed to eradicate the disease. Therefore it is, perhaps, that their efforts have failed.

We blame nobody; that is the easiest thing in the world to do—blame somebody and thereby excuse yourself! But destructive criticism gets nowhere. What we need is constructive teamwork, and this means the whole city.

The superintendent and his staff have time and again laid matters before the school board; and the school board has laid the matters before the city council; and the city council has, in turn, referred the subject to this committee and that committee, and there it has died, what, under our absurd administrative system, is a natural death.

We do not believe there is a school employee, from the superintendent to the janitor, who has not the best interests of our public schools at heart; we do not believe there is a member of the school board who would not break an engagement or forego a pleasure, if he thought that thereby he could benefit our public schools; we do not believe there is a member of our city council who would be lax in his duty if he saw his way to help the four or five thousand little ones to whom he is responsible in a measure for their equipment in life.

The trouble lies still deeper. The parents of Alexandria, who, after all, are the absolute masters of the situation, must take hold of this public school situation and change its complexion, once and for all.

We have just voted to change our form of city government. How? It can be described in two words: fixing responsibility! The Gazette believes it vital to our school system to have a smaller school board—say five members at most. Divided responsibility means no responsibility. Another thing, no man should in all candor and honesty be a member unless he has the leisure to devote to his duties; and unless he is so interested in his duties that they may lie the nearest his heart; and unless he is prepared to devote much of his time to a thorough and conscientious study of those problems that will continually present themselves. This requires intelligence and some education; but surely we have enough men in Alexandria possessed of both qualifications to serve as members of our school board.

We thank the men who voted to address the Gazette in behalf of public school education in this city. This is one of the most encouraging signs we have noticed for a long time. We can assure them that the Gazette stands first and foremost for our great public school system—that mighty bulwark of our democracy—and will always lead the fight for its maintenance and betterment.

GREATER ALEXANDRIA

(For The Gazette)

I had a dream the other night, when every thing was still I dreamed I saw a bran-new town a coming up the hill. Better buildings on its streets, and better people too. Every thing was up-to-date, 'twas modern through and through. The queerest thing about this dream—an exceeding droll one—'twas indeed a bran-new town, made from this very old one.

It's a "Greater Alexandria" we're all a wishing for and a "Greater Alexandria" we should be working for. If we want a bigger city, a better place to live, we'll have to learn to work for it and also learn to give. We'll have to turn our money in, our time and talents too, and what I'm saying here friend is said for me and you. If we want a better city—better streets and lights and walks, better homes and schools—take heed, "It's time and money talks." This a matter personal, for individaul me. Not they and them and you and your but always us and we.

We sorely need in this old town to pull us out the "groove," a team that's willing, strong and true and always on the move. It will not be a hard pull, if pulling altogether, we pull along in harmony no matter what the weather. The trouble is with some good folks they'll pull on solid track but when it rains and mud's knee-deep you'll find them holding back. Then other folks will pull all right if pulling in the lead, but hitch them back beside the tongue, they're scarcely worth their feed. Now a long pull, a strong pull, a pull from every one and a "GREATER ALEXANDRIA" in time is sure to come.

Alexandria Trades Council

Affiliated With American Federation of Labor

Alexandria, Virginia,
January 6th, 1922.

Alexandria Gazette
Alexandria, Va.
Dear Editor:

At the last regular meeting of this Council representatives from the various affiliated organizations directed the undersigned to write you with a request that you call the attention of the people of Alexandria to the situation existing with reference to the inadequate educational facilities afforded by the public schools of the city.

The discussion developed the fact that the children of Alexandria, or at least a large majority of them are being denied the opportunity of securing an education, because of the fact that they are compelled to attend school only half time on account of the crowded conditions. We feel as trade unionists that the fundamental principle of American citizenship is education and we realize that the future of our institutions rests upon this principle. Let us not forsake that principle, because it may offer some monetary advantage in the reduction of taxation. A considerable amount of disatisfaction exists among the men employed at the Torpedo Station, due to the fact that large numbers of them have come from Northern States where the educational advantages are more desirable than in Alexandria, and we feel that every effort should be put forth to provide better schooling conditions in order that Alexandria may be regarded as a city to which children can be reared and given a suitable education.

Thanking you for giving this Council space in your valuable paper I remain

Respectfully yours,
LEE VERMILLION,
Secretary.
M. B. THOMPSON,
President.

Mr. Waddington, of Wyck
By MAY SINCLAIR
(The MacMillan Company)

This is comedy at its best; not the "Great American Sense of Humor" that finds expression and satisfaction in Ring W. Lardner and Nina Wilcox Putman, but delightful work, deftly done, with absolute lack of self-consciousness on the part of the author. With due deference to her earlier stories, it is our belief that Miss Sinclair succeeds best at comedy. She has a skilled hand, the surgeon's hand, in dissecting characters, especially that of Mr. Horatio Bysshe Waddington. By liberal use of the anesthetic of kindliness, she extracts the subject's besetting sin or most tiresome virtue,—in this case Mr. Waddington's nobility,—holds it up for a moment to the gaze of her audience, pops it back into place and closes the incision before the patient realizes that anything is happening to him. Mr. Wyck "hated you to catch him in anything that was less than noble." Miss Sinclair respects this wish and to the end of the book he is never conscious that we have suspected, much less seen, his little vanities.

Ghitza and Other Romances of Gypsy Blood
By KONRAD BERCOVICI
(Boni and Liveright.)

This collection will be read eagerly by the people who crowded book stores and libraries, though with painful lack of success in any well conducted library, asking for "The Sheik." And yet it is hardly fair to the author of Ghitza to compare his work which is really good in places,—a great many places,—to the other book. "The Sheik" has no appeal beyond that of presenting something naughty to a class of readers who long to be shocked. These gipsy romances are more than that; they appeal to the desire for adventure and romance that sends a sober citizen and father of a family to see a Wild West movie and his wife to thrill over Theda Bara.

This can be said truthfully; the stories give the impression of first-hand knowledge. Though they may lack distinction and have a sameness of plot, the material for their setting was never gathered from an encyclopedia.

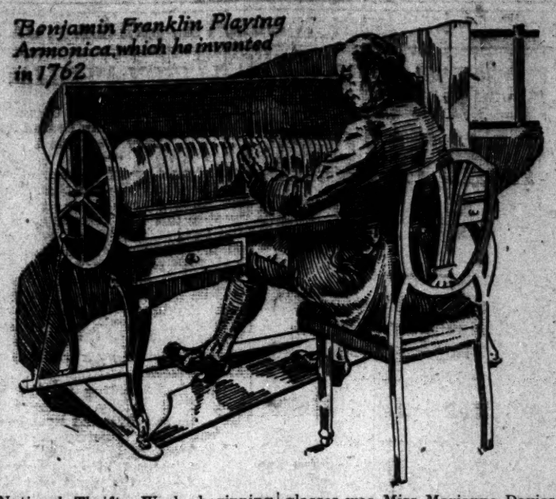
Italian Bank Failure

Referring to the closing of the Italian Discount and Trust Company by the State Superintendent of Banks, following the reported failure of the Banca Italiana Di Sconto, of Rome, Italy, W. C. Potter, President of the Guaranty Trust Company, of New York made the following statement:

"Due to the fact that the Guaranty Trust Company had a former interest in the stock of the Italian Discount and Trust Company, purchased at the time of its organization two officers of the Guaranty Trust Company have occupied positions upon its Board of Directors. In April last the Guaranty Trust Company sold its entire holding in the stock of the Italian Discount and Trust Company to the Banca Italiana Di Sconto, at a premium above the cost and since then has had no interest in its business. The Italian Discount and Trust Company has no indebtedness to the Guaranty Trust Company. On the contrary, the Guaranty Trust Company, entirely secured by Liberty bonds. The closing of the doors of the Italian Discount and Trust Co., was due to the failure of the Banca Italiana Di Sconto to pay its lira claims."

Musical Instrument Invented by "Ben" Franklin, a Feature of National Thrift Week Observance



Benjamin Franklin Playing Armonica, which he invented in 1762

National Thrift Week, beginning January 17th, will recall not only the familiar pictures of Benajmin Franklin as philosopher, patriot, scientist and man of letters, but also the less familiar but equally fascinating one of Franklin as a musician. In addition to knowing the best European music of his day, a somewhat unusual thing in a Colonial, the author of "Poor Richard", himself enriched the field of music by his invention in 1762 of the armonica, or musical glasses, which attained a high degree of popularity in the early days of American national history. Franklin became so proficient in playing this instrument that he inspired a poem of praise by one of the earliest American poets, Nathaniel Evans.

To commemorate this side of Franklin's gifted personality and to make better known his conribution to the development of the orchestra, the National Thrift Week Committee has authorized as one of its posters a picture showing the "Father of Thrift" as also a lover of music, seated in playing position before his armonica.

The principle underlying Franklin's device is that musical sounds can be produced by rubbing a wet finger over the edge of a tumbler of water, the pitch varying with the amount of water in he glass. Rather clumsy, experiments had been made previously by an Irishman named Puckeridge and a few others, with numerous tumblers of assorted lengths partly filled with liquid, so that the invention was not absolutely Franklin's. As shown by the illustration, Franklin's armonica was made by assembling a number of glass discs so that they would revolve on a spindle, passing through water as they turned. They were played by touching the moist edges of the glasses with the fingers as they revolved.

The first virtuoso on the musical glasses was Miss Marianne Davies, a relative of Franklin's who created a sensation in England a nd with her sister Cecilia, a vocalist of some fame, took the Continental public by storm. Other skilled players followed and the armonica appeared in concert in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and in many private homes of wealth. Toward the end of the eighteenth century improvements were made in the instrument, extending its range beyond the three octaves of Franklin's model and facilitating performance by the use of a fiddle bow instead of the bare fingers.

Thomas Jefferson heard the armonica in Paris and expressed the opinion that its success would be "the greatest present which has been made to the musical world this century, not excepting the pianoforte." The instrument became a part of some of the leading orchestras in Europe. Johann Gottlieb Naumann, a noted composer of the eighteenth century, played it and wrote six sonatas for it, Mozart composed several pieces for it, and even Beethoven gave it his attention in a short melodramatic selection. Yet, despite these marks of an extended influence, the instrument fell into disuse before 1840. One reason assigned for its passing is that its sweetness tended to cloy. Another is that it failed to secure an easily manipulated keyboard like the modern piano. However that may be, the armonica stands as a symbol of Franklin's many sided genius and the artistic bent of his scholarly mind. Even more, it exemplifies that characteristic of his nature which impelled him not only to seek knowledge with avidity but to put his knowledge in a form to help others. His early hardships and life experiences he turned to the service of his fellowmen in his books. The delight and relaxation he derived from music he repaid by his musical invention.

Fight Reducing Ex-Service Men

Washington, Jan. 9.—Objections to the proposed program for relieving former service men, who are holding reserve commissions in the United States Public Health Service, of their commissions and reducing their salary, now under consideration by President Harding, is voiced by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, on the grounds that this action will disrupt the workings of the service and inconvenience all disabled former service men.

The objections, which are contained in a letter addressed to the President, brand the proposed as "false economy" and states the organization's stand in the matter as follows:

"January 3, 1922.

"My dear Mr. President:

"We understand that there is contemplated the issuance of an order relieving the vast number of former service men who are holding reserve commissions in the United States Public Health Service, of their commissions and otherwise so reducing their pay and allowances for quarters, that a vast number are contemplating leaving the service, in addition to those who have already done so, and as a result, inexperience and cheap class of medical officers are or will be that the former service men about whom the administration has repeatedly, through its leaders, expressed its deepest concern and sympathy, will suffer through what will appear to be false economy. The result of this order will undoubtedly be replacing of these reserve medical officers who have had quite a number of years of experinece in caring for the former service men, by doctors who will accept these small salaries. It will be that the new appointees would either be men who have just graduated from medical schools or those who have been unsuccessful in the medical profession.

"I am sure that this is quite contrary to the administration's avowed policy in respect to giving the disabled former service men the best of treatment.

"With this thought in mind, we are taking the liberty of addressing you, urging that no such order be approved or be permitted to be put into effect.

"Very sincerely yours.

FOR GREATER ALEXANDRIA

Interview With Carroll Pierce, Vice President of Citizens National Bank

Erection of a Modern Y. M. C. A. Building, Mr. Pierce Says is Greatest Need

The erection of a modern Y. M. C. A., building in Alexandria, is, in the mind of Carroll Pierce, of the Citizens National Bank, one of the greatest proposed projects in the interest of a bigger and better city. He tells the Gazette reporter that—

"No city can become as big and as prosperous as it should become if it neglects its young men This generation of men that are now handling the affairs of the city, will, in the course of a very few, short years, all become the bygones. The management of business affairs will fall into the hands of the boys and young men of today, and if these young men are not trained, all that the present generation is doing for a GREATER ALEXANDRIA will become a loss.

"The work of training the young manhood of the city morally, physically and for the business world, can not be trusted to a more reliable institution than the Y. M. C. A. That Association teaches the young man and the boy thrift, fair play and hundreds of other things essential in the business life. It teaches the young man to value his time and to value an education, and places every one within reach of a liberal education through its schools and through its reading rooms.

"When our boys go to other cities they are taken care of by the Y. M. C. A., and when the boys from other cities come to Alexandria they have to take care of themselves in the best way they can. Not only this, but in this city there are hundreds of young men who roam the streets night after night from the time they eat their suppers till the time they go to bed; whereas if there were a Y. M. C. A., with an adequate reading room with in reach they might spend their time more pleasantly and derive a great deal more profit in the reading room.

"Yes, to have truly a greater Alexandria we must take care of its young so that the greatness acquired now may be perpetuated.

"The proposed drive for $75,000 for the erection of a modern Y. M. C. A., can easily be accomplished (with a lot of hard work). And when at last the building is erected it will be worth, in the men it will make many times its cost.

"I personally think that the institution of a Y. M. C. A. in this city would do more to bring about a GREATER ALEXANDRIA, and to carry the spirit of the thing on, than any other thing that at the present time is proposed. The churches should be much interested in this as they, too, will derive for it an unlimited benefit."

Cardinals Organize

Sylvester Breen Elected President of Baseball Club—Plan Big Season

The Cardinal Athletic Club "the oldest known sandlotters in America" will return to baseball activities during the coming baseball season.

Sylvester, A. Breen, has been elected President and Joseph E. Owens will be secretary and treasurer.

Last year was a troublesome one for the Cardinals, many things happening that caused the leaders annoyance, but matters have changed sinc then and the officrs are determined to put an all-Alexandria base ball team on th field that will win the admiration and support of the baseball fans of Alexandria.

The stars in the heaven above are always bright before and after storms but the baseball stars fade after a brief time, and, like flying meteors drop to unknown regions—never to return.

The president of the Cardinals will try to develop a winning team from among the young baseball players of Alexandria, and there is no reason why a first class combination can not be put upon the field to battle under the Cardinal colors for athletic honors. The public are anxious to see "young blood" course through the baseball veins of the players and are tired of seeing the same men perform year in and year out.

Give the youngsters your support, brother fans, and when the Cardinal Baseball Arena is completed you will be given every chance to see real baseball contests between evenly matched teams.

A meeting to map out plans for the players will be held at the home of the presidnt, 1322 King street, Tuesday evening, January 17. Those meaning strictly business are welcome to attend but those who have no intention of keeping their word of honor as relates to playing baseball with the Cardinals are not wanted. The Cardinals have always treated their players honestly, and in the future will ask the same consideration from every individual player.

The Cardinals mottoes for the year 1922: "We play to win. If you have a grouch sink it in the Potomac River. If you are a sledge wielder, leave your sledge at home—we cannot stand the knocks."

Charlottesville—Virginia's debating schedule for the coming spring is nearing completion and will be announced within a few days. A debate with Tulane University, of New Orleans, will be held here, while negotiations are in progress for trips to Cornell, Princeton and Vanderbilt. A representative wil also be sent to the Southern Oratorical contest, to be held this year at the University of Alabama.

room they made their way. Here, explained Mr. Green was the place the home-grown pork, the eggs, the corn bread, the beef and once in a while the hash, was prepared for the tables All the workers in the kitchen, except the head cook, are inmates. The reformatory makes all the bread that is used and is especially proud of its quality. The corn bread which is fed each day at noon was, by far, the best the reporter had eaten since he left the farm—at least that is what he told Mr. Green.

Then at the Commissary the brooms which are made at the reformatory were displayed. These brooms are of the best quality and are used exclusively by the District of Columbia Government. The Commissary was fully equipped with everything that could possibly be needed around the place. There were suits, shos, salt, sugar, hardware and everything for use on the farm. In the cold storage department were the carcasses of the one hundred 200-pound porkers that had been killed the day before and about as many more will find their way in during the next week.

And then the dairy—the best in Northern Virginia if the dairymen's statement may be taken as authority. Fifty fine looking Holsteins were at their places in the spotlessly clean, big modern dairy barn. About 120 gallons of milk is being produced daily, it was said. All of this milk is used on the farm; for the table, for butter and for the pigs and young calves.

The Work House boasts one of the finest hennerys in this section of the State. Mr. Green stated that at the end of each day over 1,000 eggs were gathered in from this establishment.

Down on Occoquan Bay is the brick yard for which the Work House is also famous. Every brick manufactured here—around 4,000,000 per year—is used by the District of Columbia. According to Mr. Green's statment, every brick in the Central High School building in Washington was made in this yard. At present bricks are being made for the addition to Eastern High School.

Mr. Green said that there was much more to be seen and invited the reporter to return and finish the tour. He also extends, through the Gazette, an invitation to visit them to all who are interested in the way things are being done in this institution.

Extract of a letter from Cleveland, to a gentleman in Georgetown, dated Dec. 25.

"Last night I received a letter from Detroit, of the 8th instant, Col Brush is dangerously sick—the troops are dying at the rate of six to fifteen per day. The sickness pervades the citizens also. It is rumored here, on what authority I know not, that the whole effective force at Detroit, does not exceed 250 men fit for duty. That they are, in consequence of their weakness, added to some late movements among the Indians, much alarmed. The late reverses at the foot of the Lake, and at Fort George, when known, will naturally increase the panic. I am seriously apprehensive that the whole of Michigan will, ere spring, fall under the dominion, of our enemy. Should that happen it will be utterly ruined. Can, or will, our Government ward off the impending storm? Poor Michigan bleeds."

Rise in Liberty Bond Prices Sign of Return to Normalcy

Boston Post Sees Reason For American People to Rejoice Over Steady Advance of Securities Issued to Finance War

"The steady and vigorous rise in the prices of Liberty Bonds" says the Boston Post editorially, is a development that may well bring gladness to the hearts of the American people, and for reasons entirely aside from the mere appreciation in the market value of their investments, for the rise in bond prices, thus reflecting the drop in the price of money, is the most convincing evidence of the trend toward normalcy.

"One hears a good deal of cynical talk, however, about the advancing bond prices. 'Now that the small patriotic investor who paid par for the bonds during the war has been shaken out the 'bgi fellows' are putting the prices up,' is common comment by these cynics. This is the merest drivel, not only not having any basis in fact but in general is absolutely contrary to the fact.

"The bonds were bought by some 20,000,000 investors, which virtually meant the entire population able to buy. They were issued by the billions because the Government which means the people had to have the funds to carry on the war. Every banker in the country knew at the time that there was no investment demand that couid absorb these billions, no matter what interest rate was offered. Indeed if the interest rate had ben placed much higher it would have caused all other securities to tumble because the investors would sell their corporation securities in order to buy the Government issues. The result would have been a terrible financial panic.

"So the bonds were bought for patriotic reasons mainly, the investment consideration being secondary. Now, with 20,000,000 holders, hundreds of thousands of whom were sure to die each year, a great many of the bonds had to be thrown on the market and naturally the prices dropped. Even after the war ended the prices slipped down further. But instead of the small investors being the victims, the fact is many of the biggest corporations in the country took losses. Being unable to borrow more at the banks, these corporations during the financial strain of 1920 had to sell their Liberty bonds at practically the lowest record prices. On the other hand, bankers report that the buying at the low prices was mainly by small investors, who 'averaged' in this way on their original purchases from the Government.

"Instead of being 'skinned,' the small investor has quite generally profited by the fluctuation in prices, although, of course, there are innumerable cases where people of small or moderate means had to sell at less than they originally paid. But and large, however, the loss incurred in this way was a mere drop in the bucket to the losses that our young men suffered who left good jobs for a year or two to join the Army at a dollar a day.

"As compared to the financial sacrifices made by the people of other countries ours has been almost nothing; for not only have the bonds of other nations declined more than ours but even the very money of the people has depreciated, and in some instances has become virtually worthless."

NON-COMMUNICABLE DISEASES

Among the diseases that are not transmitted directly from one person to another there are many whose causes are known and still many others whose origin, prevention and remedy are still obscure. In this group of non-communicable diseases are included all defects in the structure of the body, both hereditary and acquired, insanity and other nervous diseases, new growths such as tumors and cancer, disturbances of bodiliy processes such as malnutrition and gout, and the important class of generative diseases, like arteriosclerosis, in which tissues become hard ened and fibrous and hence less able to perform their normal functions.

The degenerative diseases are playing a menacing part in national health. The average length of life in the United States has shown a marked increase during the last 40 years, but this gain represents chiefly the saving of life through prevention of communicable disease, especially among babies and children. On the other hand, among people who have passed their thirtieth year the death rates are actually increasing. This increase is most marked after the age of 45, and is caused chiefly by the increase of cancer and of diseases of the heart, blood vessels and kidneys. Degeneration of the tissues is normally a condition typical of old age, but the important facts in this connection are that the degenerative changes now occur prematurely, so that it is essential that their causes should be generally understood.

According to a bulletin of the New York Department of Health, some of the probable causes of the degenerative diseases are: Conditions of life which result in continued overwork, mental overwork in particular; worry, excitement, insufficient recreation and exercise, all types of nervous strain typical of modern life, especially in cities; irritating substances in the body, including poisonous substances resulting from infectious diseases, and from syphilis in particular; poisons from chronic infections, alcohol, industrial poisons such as lead and other metals; overeating and improper eating, especially of meat and other proteins and rich or highly seasoned food; faulty digestion, constipation and imperfect elimination through the kidneys.

The importance of an early recognition of any of the degenerative diseases cannot be overemphasized. In many of these troubles the symptoms are not pronounced and the victims have no knowledge of their condition until it is far advanced. The simplest, and at the same time most certain, way of stopping the development of these diseases at their inception is a periodic complete physical examination by a competent physician, once a year for example, and this custom is becoming more and more prevalent among people who think about problems of health.

Wise Use of the Dollar

By the Honorable John Barton Payne, Chairman, American Red Cross

Man is so constituted that he has a recurring series of wants. For instance, however, he can not eat enough in one day to satisfy his hunger even for a week. So with our income, it must be constant and continuous, and the individual or nation that consumes daily or yearly all it produces can never make progress; like the squirrel we must lay something by. "Where there is no vision the people perish." Vision means Thrift.

Money means the ability to meet our needs. In this we have first, the pay envelope, i. e., the daily income; next, the wise use of the dollars thus received, having in mind future as well as present needs, saving something for the day of need instead of spending everything for today. The foolish person thinks only of the present and makes no provision for disaster or future needs; the wise man thinks of the morrow, when sickness, unemployment, the education of children, old age or the like, will come upon him, and lays in a store for such needs. This is easy when the habit is formed.

The thrifty man saves regularly some share of his income, invests these savings in something certain and secure, even though the interest rate is low. If he tries the hazard of a high rate of interest or income, all may be lost. An honest business rarely justifies high rates of interest; speculation and hazard always go with high rates of interest.

Thrift soon becomes a habit, and becomes a real pleasure in itself. The Government can render the people no habits of thrift by affffording them opgrater service than ti lead them into portunity to invest small sums safely, with a reasonable income.

"Too much can not be said and done to encourage people in reasonable vision of the Treasury Department. Chicago, in a letter to the Savings Dethrift," writes Dr. Harry Pratt Judson President of the University of are the only safeguards, in my opinion, "Industry, thrift, and social stability that we have in this troubled condition of the world.'"

For a Conference

Washington, Jan. 7.—Asking the United States to unite in an economic conference with the leading nations of the world to do in the realms of industry and finance what has been done so well by the Washington Conference in the realm of political understanding and in the reduction of armament the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has published an official statement regarding "America's economic obligation to her association in the late wars."

It urges that the debts of various countries to this country be handled individually, and that in accordance with the dictates of justice and the principles of economic law, the United States do everything possible to relieve the other nations from their economic difficulties, and so help restore peace and property to the world

It says in part:

"In view of the enormous losses of life and property incurred by the nations associated with the United States in the late war, during the period when the United States was ses of life and property incurred by the nations associated with the United States in the late war, during the preparing to do her part.

"And in view of the fact that the sums loaned to them by the United States were expended in this country for food and ammunitions by which they were enabled to continue the struggle until America was duly equipped:

"We believe that under suitable conditions, each case being handled by itself, the dictates of justice and the principles of economic law require that the United Statse should consider and adopt some suitable adjustment of these debts of the nations to the United States in order that they shall be as far as possible relieved from their economic difficulties.

"Because of the world war, the United States became in a moment of time the most powrful and the riches of all the nations. But power and wealth bring special opportunities and responsibilities. The recovery of economic stability by the nations of the world and especially of Europe, depends we are assured, largely on what America does, or fails to do.

We therefore ask that the United States unite in an economic conference of the leading nations to do in the realm of industry and finance what has been so well done by the Washington Conference in the realms of political understanding and in the reduction of armaments."

Bare Legs Now Barred From Baltimore Stage

Baltimore, Jan. 4.—Bare-legged show girls are barred from Baltimore theatre stages under an order of the Chief of Police. At yesterday's matinee Dottie and Lottie and all the others pirouetted with nothing between their skin and the air but the approving glances of spectators. Last night they appeared in white eshings, demure as ever chorus girls could be.

Chief Henry today denied that the Lord's Day Alliance, the activities of which sometimes extend over into Monday on account of the overflow of vice, had anything to do with his order, "It was brought to my attention," he said. "that the girls weren't wearing 'em. and I sent word around that they'd better put 'em on."

AVIATORS IN COLD AND GALE BREAK NON-STOP RECORD

Edward Stinson.

Flying for twenty-seven hours' two minutes and fifty seconds in the face of a gale that reached a velocity of sixty miles an hour, the JL-6, all-metal monoplane, broke the world's endurance record for aircraft at Mineola, N. Y. The triumphant American aviators are Edward Stinson and Lloyd Berraud. Stinson was in charge of the plane, assisted by Bertraud. The aviators took off at 8:58 a. m. and landed the next morning at 11:17 a. m. At the start of their trip they were confronted by a heavy snow storm. When the storm stopped a high wind sprang up, and during the remainder of the flight the machine was buffeted in a gale of sixty miles an hour. Both Stinson and Bertaud were army aviators during the war. Stinson's home is in McKeesport, Pa. Bertaud spent two years in the army airservice and instructed at Bolling Field, Washington, and at Love Field, Dallas, Texas. The above illustration shows the type of plane used in the record-breaking flight and Aviator Stinson, who piloted the machine.

A. L. I. Still Winning

A Great Schedule For The Coming Week In Basketball.

Armory Hall was the stage where two interesting basketball games were played Saturday night. The preliminary contest was between two local girl clubs, the Virginia Preps and George Mason High School. This was the final of a three game series in which the Preps were victorious by a score of 8 to 5. The tossing of Misses Chilcotte and Hohenstein, the defensive playing of Misses Schafe, Irby and Saunders, and the work in center by Miss Orlinger were all factors in winning the game.

The big game was the first of a three games series between the Alexandria Light Infantry and the Arlington A. C. It was an easy but interesting game, the soldiers winning by the score of 61 to 11.

The soldiers have thus far this season been victorious fourteen times in as many starts and have an aggregation the Washington Quints seem unable to subdue. Authorities of the game predict the only probable team capable of giving the locals the short end of a game is the Yankees of Washington, and as they are unwilling to take any chances with their honors this early in the season, the locals are making plays for laurels in Baltimore and Philadelphia. The Yankees have found their equals but once this season, and this battle was with the fast quint known as the Baltimore Orioles who visit Alexandria on January 21st., to meet the soldiers.

The A. L. I. team is composed of local talent and critics say without reserve that it is the best team that Alexandria has had to represent it since it has been a contestant in the sport. The acquisition of Eisgrau, formerly of Brooklyn but now engaged in a local business, and Dudek, ex-captain of the quint from the Dreadnaught North Dakota; Champions of the U. S. Navy, have considerably strengthened the soldiers team and with practice and a better knowledge of signals the A. L. I. quint is dstined to win the championship and rank foremost in basketball circles.

The coming week presents an interesting program for basket-ball fans and those interested in the game will find plenty of amusement in the following games.

Former Undertaker is Called Ghoul by Judge

Paid for Funeral He Buried Body Unclothed and in Pine Box

Harrisburg Pa., Jan. 9.—The actions of Charles H. Mauk, a former undertaker, in burying a body unclothed and in a pine box instead of a casket, after he had been paid for a first-class funeral, were described as goulish by Judge William H. Hargest today in sentencing him to a term of eight months imprisonment.

Counsel for Mank appealed and the former undertaker was released under bail to await the action of a higher court.

"The facts disclosed in this case," the court said in its decision, "show an offense about as ghoulish cold-blooded and reprehensible as a case of this kind could possibly be. No man could have committed this offense except that he had a hardness of heart that was, too say the least, unusual.

"The jury have found this body was buried without care, attention or proper clothing or casket, for the purpose of filching a few dollars from persons who paid for the burial. We cannot overlook the character of the offense, because it was not an offense which was committed under sudden impulse; it must have been prompted by a disregard for the solemn rights of people in distress and in mourning, to say nothing of a total lack of respect for the dead."

"You rent this house?"

"Yes, but it is almost like owning it."

"How?"

"I haven't paid the rent for the past ten months."

WIFE IS PICTURE OF GOOD HEALTH

Doesn't Look Like She Was Ever Sick A Day In Her Life, Declares Husband

"My wife and I are so happy over her wonderful recovery that we are all the time telling people about this great medicine Tanlac," said J. W. Hogsed, 1521 Rockland St., Pittsburgh, Pa. Mr. Hogsed has been superintendent of the Curry Building for the past twelve years, and is widely known and highly respected.

"This year for the first time in twelve long years my wife is in good health, and Tanlac is what has brought about the great change At the time she began taking it she had suffered from stomach trouble until she was almost a nervous wreck and was so weak she could hardly walk across the room. Everything she ate hurt her, and she just had to live on milk toast. After eating just a few mouthfuls, she began suffering from cramps, and for hours was in perfect agony. She could scarcely sleep any, and was so thin and weak. I just about gave up all hope of ever seeing her well again.

"But a neighbor told us about Tanlac, and it helped her so much that now she doesn't seem like the same person. She eats three meals every day now, and nver has a touch of indigestion. All her old time strength and energy has come back to her, and, the fact is, she is in as good health as she was fully fifteen years ago, and doesn't look like she ever was sick a day in her life. Tanlac is such a great medicine every sufferer ought to know about it."

Tanlac is sold in Alexandria by Edgar Warfield, Jr., and by leading druggists everywhere.

An American Doughboy In France.

By ELLIOTT F. HOFFMAN
(Historian of Alexandria Post No. 24, American Legion.)
(For the Alexandria Gazette.)

At 1 p. m., April 18th the Leviathan, formerly the German Vaterland, weighed anchor, the bands began to play "Homeward Bound," and amid wild cheers of the troops on board, that great ocean grey hound began to plow its way through the 3,000 miles of water separating America from the war-worn Europe. For seven days and nights, crowded in small compartments, we whiled away the time, looking forward to the day when we would once more get a peep at the "old girl" who stands with torch in hand at the entrance to New York harbor.

The food we had on board was excellent, and, although because of the large number of troops aboard, meals were served only twice a day, every one seemed to have enough to eat. Uncle Sam used rare judgment in feeding the troops well on their return voyage, that they might forget having gone hungry so much of the time while fighting overseas. Candy was sold on board, and, as we had been paid while at Brest, all were able to satisfy their sweet tooth.

Each day a notice was posted on the bulletin board of the ship, showing the distance from New York, and these figures were watched most eagerly by al lon board. On th morning of the 25th a U. S. revenue cutter hove in sight, and then we began to realize that the Statue of Liberty was not far away. It was just about noon when we arrived at Ambrose lighthouse, where the "welcome boats" were lying in waiting. The governor of New York had a committee to meet the troop ships, their boat displaying a very large flier which read "Welcome Home." The state of Iowa had sent out a boat from which flew a banner reading "Hello 168th—Iowa Welcomes You." I may remark in passing that the 168th Infantry was originally a part of the state's national guard. Another banner read "Welcome Alabama." This was intended presumably to mean the 167th Infantry, which was from that State, but which was aboard a ship headed for another port. Many small craft bore the families and friends of those on board. These welcome boats followed alongside the Leviathan, and the mad cheering from the troops was deafening; but the climax came when the doughboys caught a glimpse of the "old girl." Many times had we said to each other—"Oh for the day when we can 'focus our peepers' on that dear old girl in New York harbor.'" And there she was with outstretched arms as if to welcome us, looking just as we had left her.

Slowly the many tugs drew this huge ocean liner into her dock at Hoboken; and, as the sun was slowly sinking in the west, the troops began to disembark. First the sick and wounded, and they were many, were carried off on stretchers and placed in ambulances, of which there were perhaps several hundred waiting at the dock. From another gang plank the 165th Infantry (New York) were disembarking; many ferry boats were waiting to carry them to the opposite side of the river, where special trains were ready to convey them to Camp Merritt. Meanwhile the 168th Infantry and "casual," to which the late C. Marshall Schofield belonged, were held on board until the next morning, at which time the "casuals" were assigned to various hospitals around New York. The 168th Infantry were conveyed to Camp Upton, on Long Island, pending demobilization. All of the original Iowa boys were carried to Des Moines Iowa where a big parade was held in their honor; while the rest of us were sent to the camp nearest our town. Here we were paid in full, handed a bonus of $60, permitted to retain the soiled clothing we wore, and given transportation to our homes. Thus Uncle Sam released the American Doughboys from France.
